

The plight of Roma sees little change

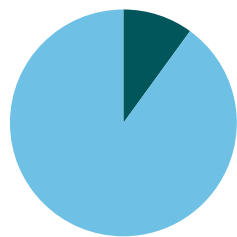

Anti-Gypsyism across the EU remains a persistent barrier to improving the social and economic situation of Roma today.

Living with anti-Gypsyism

- Increase in segregated education for Roma children

Bringing about change

- Some signs of national Roma integration strategies explicitly addressing anti-Gypsyism but not many
- Some initiatives to promote Roma inclusion and empowering young Roma and Roma women

- A few national courts ruled against Roma discrimination in work, education and housing
- The EU's High Level Group against racism and xenophobia has prioritised the fight against discrimination and anti-Gypsyism
