FURTHER INFORMATION ON FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS PROTECTION MECHANISMS

The EU Agency for Fundamental Rights (FRA) provides independent, evidence-based assistance and expertise on fundamental rights to EU institutions and Member States. FRA's mandate does not give it the authority to deal with individual cases or complaints. Nor does it have the authority to monitor EU Member States for the purposes of determining the existence of human rights violations.

Information on other bodies that may be able to help you, or procedures that may be open to you, can be found in this document.

For a comprehensive list of EU and International bodies to lodge a complaint, please visit the following link: https://beta.e-justice.europa.eu/35915/EN/other_eu_and_international_complaint_bodies

General queries about EU matters may be directed to the Europe Direct response service by calling the toll-free number 00 800 6 7 8 9 10 11, from anywhere in the EU, or through their website: <http://ec.europa.eu/europedirect/>

NATIONAL COMPLAINTS MECHANISMS

Where possible you should always begin your complaint at the national level. Your Member State has set up bodies specialised to give information on non-discrimination and/or fundamental rights issues. It may be possible that this body has the power to decide on individual complaints, but you should check this with the body itself.

Other associations or organisations probably also exist at the national level that can offer you further support and information on making a complaint. Information on these should be available at the national level. In particular you should be aware that the following might exist:

- Local advice or legal support agencies, facilitating access for victims of rights violations to the legal system;
- Trade unions or professional associations, representing the interests and well-being of their members;
- Confidential ‘helplines’, advising individuals how to take action;
- Non-Governmental Organisations, giving out information and supporting court cases or complaints on behalf of those alleging violations of their rights.

NON-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANISATIONS

There are many NGOs operating at the national and European level. While most NGOs do not deal directly with individual complaints they are a valuable source of information and contacts for those experiencing discrimination on different grounds, or other alleged violations of fundamental rights. If you are searching for an NGO working on an area relevant to you a useful starting point is the Commission-funded Platform of European Social NGOs (Social Platform). The Social Platform represents NGOs covering a wide range of social issues at the local, regional, national, and EU levels. Below are examples of NGOs dealing with different types of discrimination:

- Issues related to ageism are tackled by AGE (European Older People’s Platform) - <http://www.age-platform.eu/>
- Discrimination on the grounds of sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression and sex characteristics is addressed by ILGA Europe (International Lesbian and Gay Association) – <https://www.ilga-europe.org/>
- ENAR (European Network Against Racism) deals with racism and xenophobia – <https://www.enar-eu.org/>
- EDF (European Disability Forum) advocates for the rights of the disabled – <http://www.edf-feph.org/>
- European Women’s Lobby dealing with discrimination against women - <http://www.womenlobby.org/>

In addition to the NGOs mentioned above the Social Platform lists NGO members covering other themes such as children’s rights, access to health care and education. A list of their members and the issues they cover can be found on their web page: <http://www.socialplatform.org/>. If you find an NGO that deals with the issue that relates to your complaint, you may be able to access information on their website that lists who their members are in your Member State.

COMPLAINTS MECHANISMS AT THE EU

Where you feel that your rights have been infringed by a Member State or by the E.U. institutions you wish to contact one of the following bodies. Note that these web pages may appear initially in English. However, there is usually an option on the page to choose a different language.

- The European Parliament's Committee on Petitions:
<https://petiport.secure.europarl.europa.eu/petitions/en/home>

This is available to EU citizens and those people resident in an EU Member State. You may make a complaint that is related to an issue of EU interest or responsibility.

- The European Ombudsman:
<https://www.ombudsman.europa.eu/en/home>

This is available to EU citizens and those people resident in an EU Member State. You may make a complaint relating to poor or bad administration by a body of the EU.

- The European Commission:
https://ec.europa.eu/info/about-european-commission/contact/problems-and-complaints/complaints-about-breaches-eu-law/how-make-complaint-eu-level_en

Complaint form: https://ec.europa.eu/assets/sg/report-a-breach/complaints_en/

This is available to anyone who wishes to complain to the Commission that a member State has failed to comply with EU law.

EUROPEAN AND INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS ORGANISATIONS

You may also wish to consult the web pages of the Council of Europe or the United Nations. Some of the bodies listed below have power to deal with individual complaints, while others may be able to offer you with information. More details are available through the web links. Do note that for some of these bodies you will need to satisfy certain requirements before they are able to deal with a complaint; in particular the European Court of Human Rights and the UN's treaty bodies. The most significant of these is the obligation to attempt to resolve your complaint through mechanisms available at the national level.

Council of Europe bodies

United Nations & international human rights treaty bodies

The United Nations has two distinct avenues for individual complaints. The Human Rights Council (which replaced the Commission on Human Rights in 2006) operates ‘special procedures’ allowing an individual to make a complaint to an independent expert holding a mandate either in a relevant theme or relating to a particular State. The ‘special procedures’ are available to individuals anywhere in the world in relation to any State, as long as their complaint falls within an established mandate. Information on how to access this procedure may be found via:

<https://spsubmission.ohchr.org/en>

In addition to the ‘special procedures’ a State that is party to a given UN-sponsored human rights treaty is subject to supervision by the relevant monitoring body. Several treaties provide the possibility of making an individual complaint, as long as the State has given its prior consent. Information on making a complaint to the treaty-bodies may be found via:
